In addition to the great change made among commissioned officers, the Rebellion has had the effect of changing, to some extent, the material of the army. In the old times of peace the current requirements unemployed foreigners, who, having come to our shores eacking work and finding none, had no other resort than to enlist. The old regiments still contain a large number of foreigners, but in the new regiago the proportion of Americans in the army was not more than ten per cent. The last return, made about a year ago, showed that out of every 28 soldiers 7 were Americans, 10 Irish, 7 Germans, 2 such a number of foreign subjects in our army-for most of our foreign-born soldiers are not naturalized sion of Twiggs's surrender, where the men had every chance to join the Rebels, and were importuned to do so by their recreant officers, while the loyal officers told them they were free to follow the bent of their own inclinations, and come North or remain with the Rebels, just as they pleased, not more than two or three forsook the glorious Stars and Stripes for the miserable barred emblem of Rebels and traitors.

In mititary circles, considerable speculation is already indulged in as to what strength the standing army wilbe fixed at after the Rebellion shall be finally army will be fixed at after the Rebellion shall be finally crushed, and the probable aggregate is variously estimated at from 50,000 to 150 000 men. All speculations on this subject are simply idle. According to of the United States, now amounts to 7,578 officers questionable whether this number will be sufficient may be summed up briefly thus:

the old army of peaceable times, and the new, provisional army of the Rebellion. These armies are organized on different plans. The old regiments of cavalry and infantry consist of ten companies each, and the artillery of twelve companies, two of which are understood to be light and ten heavy; while the new cavalry and artillery regiments are composed of twelve companies each, and the infantry of twentyfour companies. The difference between the strength of an old regiment and a new one is shown by the The regiment is divided into twelve light batteries.

The general organization of the new army, as planned by the War Department, and approved by Congress, has not been carried out-circumstances baving prevented it. The force was to have been organized into two divisions of two brigades each. Each division should have one Major-General, two Dr. Aider-de-Camp, one Assistant Adjutant-General, one Quartermaster, and one Commissary of Subsistence. Each brigade should have one Brigadier-General, one Aide-de-Camp, one Assistant-Quartermaster and one Assistant-Commissary.

Charles Samner on the War.

Senator Summer was invited to speak at the Massachusetts Republican State Convention in Worces- by the dramatic strength of the situation, always ter to-day, but having been prevented from attending, sent the following letter:

Boston, Sept. 9, 1802.

Boston, Sept. 9, 1802.

Bosros, Sept. 9, 1862.

My Dear Sir: As a servant of the S atc, I have always on ormer occasions recognized the right of my constinents in State Convention to expect from me such counsels on public affairs as I could offer, and I have accepted with gratitude the invitations with which they have honored me. If now, in these dark days, when danger thickens, I do not take advantage of the opportunity which you give me, believe me it is not from meidlerence to the occasion; nor is it because our duties at this moment are sion; nor is it because our duties at this moment are Egerly do our gallant soldiers (God bless them!) rush to the field of death for the sake of their country. Eagerly do good citizens at home (God bless them!) contribute of their abundance, or it may be of their poverty, to smooth the lot of our soldiers. But there is another daty hardly less commanding. It is for all to mate, without distinction of party, to uphold the Government, and also to uphold those who uphold the Government. I recognize, therefore, the just liberality of the call for our Convention, which is addressed not only to Republicans, but also "to all who support the present National and State Governments, and are in favor of all means necessary for the effectual suppression of the rebellion." Under such a cull there is no patriot citizen of the Commonwealth who may not claim a piece.

Were I able to be at the Convention, according to the invitation with which you have honored me, gladly would I appeal to all such citizens. This Treasury yesterday morning, was larger than on gladly would I appeal to all such citizens. This country must be saved, and among the omens of victory I haif confidently that unanimity of sentiment and trust with which all loyal citizens now look to the National Government, determined that nothing of energy or contribution, or sacrifice shall be wanting, by which its supremacy may be avain established. Another omen is yet needed. It is that the cople, forgetting the past, shall lift themselves to that platform of justice and truth, where candor shall at het prevail, and all shall frow a indignantly upon the rancors and animesties of party; shall. nyon the rancors and animostities of party; shall silence the senseless prejudices of personal hate, and shall stille the fals-hoods of calumny, so that at least here among ourselves there may be that unity and concord which will give irresistable strength to

CITY ITEMS.

WINTER GARDEN .- Full houses each evening this week have witnessed the reproductions of Mrs. Bateman's tragedy, "Geraldine," Miss Bateman plays the part of the heroine with an earnestness and a devotion beyond her usual efforts; a circumstance readily attributable to the natural sympathy in this case between the artist and the author. Not the least striking feature of the representation is the performance of the part of the Bard by Mr. Bateman. The wild and passionate force of his acting at the close of the first act, which gains superior effect secures the honors of the evening. "Geraldine" will be repeated throughout this week, and " Macbeth" will be produced next Monday evening.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-ONE PER CENT PRE-MIUM .- That was the figure at which New-York Goo Light Stock stood yesterday, as the following report of sales will show:
